Three Unanswered Questions:

Was Barack Obama Born in Kenya?

Is He Really a Citizen of Indonesia?

Does the Constitution still Matter?

Electors are sworn to uphold it with their vote on December 15th in the Electoral College. But they must first know for sure that the candidates meet the Constitutional requirements for the office of President beginning with being a natural born citizen.

That's what Philip J. Berg has asked the United States Supreme Court to verify. The Supreme Court has asked for a response from Senator Barack Obama along with the Democratic National Committee and Federal Elections Commission. And they have until December 1st to respond. Other cases have been filed asking for the same thing.

Not extreme. Not fringe. Just Constitutional.

Obama says he's qualified. But, Berg, multiple legal suits and a growing number of American citizens are saying: "Prove it." A basic, vital and Constitutional request.

Why won't Obama answer such a simple and essential request?

Exhibit A: The Grandmother's tape

Barack Obama's own grandmother said he was born in Kenya. While politicians are known for it, grandmothers seldom lie. It's recorded on tape:

"I was in the delivery room in [Mombosa,] Kenya, when he was born Aug. 4, 1961." – Sarah Obama, Obama's paternal grandmother

Exhibit B: No Original Birth Certificate

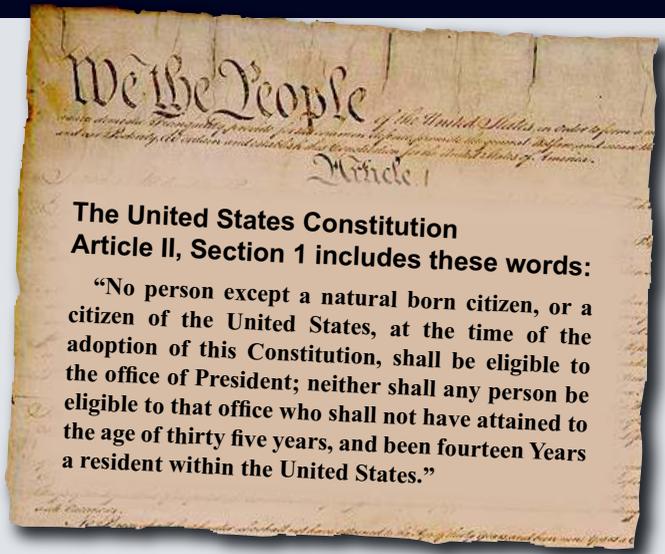

Experts have called the Certification of Live Birth posted online a forgery. Berg reported "It's clearly been altered," which invalidates it, according to the document itself. Add to this the Hawaiian law at the time which allowed people to register for this non-hospital short form certificate (without a doctor's signature) up to one year from the date of the child's birth.

Exhibit C: Indonesian citizenship

Only Indonesian citizens could attend Indonesian schools at the time Barack Obama attended the Indonesian school where he was registered as Barry Soetoro. His citizenship was listed as Indonesian, his religion as Islam, and his father as Lolo Soetoro, M.A. There was also no dual citizenship at the time. If he was adopted by his Indonesian stepfather, he would have forfeited any U.S. citizenship he may have had, just as when a child is adopted in America, he or she becomes an American.

Exhibit D: U.S. Law

In addition, according to U.S. law pertaining to births abroad, from "Dec. 24, 1952, to Nov. 13, 1986," in order to register the child's birth as a U.S. natural-born citizen at the time of Obama's birth, he or she must be: 1. Born to two U.S. citizen parents; OR 2. If only one parent was a U.S. citizen at the time of the birth, that parent must have resided in the United States for at least 10 years, at least five of which must be after the age of 14.

The United States Constitution Article II, Section 1 includes these words:

"No person except a natural born citizen, or a citizen of the United States, at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, shall be eligible to the office of President; neither shall any person be eligible to that office who shall not have attained to the age of thirty five years, and been fourteen Years a resident within the United States."

Since Barack Obama's father was not a U.S. citizen and Obama's mother was only 18 at the time of his birth, she failed to meet the legal requirements of U.S. residency for at least five years after the age of 14.

Either the Constitution matters or it doesn't.

If we are willing to ignore the constitutional requirements for the highest office in our land, what else are we willing to forgo? That part about free speech? Freedom of the press? Freedom of religion?
